

Code of Conduct

INTRODUCTION:

The most valuable asset of our Company is our commitment. Among the important things this commitment represents our Company's reputation for honesty and integrity.

This Code of Business Conduct is designed to give you a broad and clear understanding of the conduct expected of all our employees everywhere we do business. The Code of Business Conduct applies to all employees of the company and its subsidiaries, who, unless otherwise specified, will be referred to jointly as "employees."

What you will see in the pages that follow are a series of conduct and ethical guidelines, including examples of real-life dilemmas faced by company employees. Most of what you will read probably won't surprise you, for the overarching theme of these guidelines can be summed up this way: As a representative of the company, you must act with honesty and integrity in all matters.

HIGHLIGHTS:

- Employees must follow the law wherever they are around the country.
- Financial records—both for internal activities and external transactions— must be timely and accurate
- Company assets—including computers, materials and work time—must not be used for personal benefit.
- Customers and suppliers must be dealt with fairly and at arm's length.
- Employees must never attempt to bribe or improperly influence a government official.
- Employees must safeguard the company's nonpublic information.
- Violations of the Code include asking other employees to violate the Code, not reporting a Code violation or failing to cooperate in a Code investigation.
- Violating the Code will result in discipline. Discipline will vary depending on the circumstances and may include, alone or in combination, a letter of reprimand, demotion, loss of merit increase, suspension or even termination depending on the provisions of Labor Law & Bi-Laws of the Company.
- Under the Code, certain actions require written approval by your Principal Manager. The Principal Manager is your CEO, Corporate function Head, or the Incharge of your operating unit. For those who are themselves Principal Managers, written approvals must come from the Board of directors.

If you have questions about any situation, ask. Always ask.

This Code should help guide your conduct. But the Code cannot address every circumstance and isn't meant to; this is not a catalogue of workplace rules. You should be aware that the company has policies in such areas as fair competition, workplace conduct and environmental protection. Employees should consult the policies of the company in specific areas as they apply.

YOUR RESPONSIBILITIES:

It is your responsibility to read and understand the Code of Business Conduct. You must comply with the Code in both letter and spirit. Ignorance of the Code will not excuse you from its requirements.

- Follow the law wherever you are and in all circumstances.
- Never engage in behavior that harms the reputation of the company.
- Some situations may seem ambiguous. Exercise caution when you hear your-self or someone else say, "Everybody does it," "Maybe just this once," "No one will ever know" or "It won't matter in the end." These are signs to stop, think through the situation and seek guidance. Most importantly, don't ignore your instincts. Ultimately, you are responsible for your actions.
- You may discuss concerns with your manager, responsible employees in the Finance or HR or, in the case of potential criminal issues, with Legal Advisor.
- Employees are obliged to report violations, and suspected violations, of the Code. This includes situations where a manager or colleague asks you to violate the Code. In all cases, there will be no reprisals for making any reports, and every effort will be made to maintain confidentiality.
- You can report violations of the Code to your manager or higher levels of management, to the HR or Finance Departments.
- Employees are obliged to cooperate with investigations into Code violations and must always be truthful and forthcoming in the course of these investigations.
- Managers have important responsibilities under the Code. Managers must understand the Code, seek guidance when necessary and report suspected Code violations. If a manager knows that an employee is contemplating a prohibited action and does nothing, the manager will be responsible along with the employee.

The most important message: When you are uncertain about any situation, ask for guidance.

Chapter 1: The Company: Brief Profile, Vision & Mission, Values, Quality Policy

PROFILE:

WorldLink is the largest Internet Service Provider (ISP) in Nepal and one of the most prominent IT companies. Founded in September 1995 with the aim of providing Internet and IT services by its present Chairman and Managing Director, Dileep Agrawal, WorldLink started off by providing store-and-forward e-mail services over a dial-up link to the Internet in the US. In March 1997,

WorldLink started providing full Internet access over a dedicated leased-line to the Internet backbone in the US through Teleglobe International. From September 1999 till June 2008, WorldLink has been connecting to the Internet over a direct satellite uplink through its own VSAT terminal, thereby completely bypassing Nepal Telecommunications Corporation, the local PTT, however now WorldLink owns International Private Leased Circuit (IPLC) network over undersea fiber to Singapore and peers directly with Singtel.

VISION STATEMENT:

"To connect everyone, anywhere, all the time."

MISSION:

"Enrich the lives of our customers through world-class superior connectivity. "

We will strive to achieve excellence in our supply chain with a common vision in the areas of quality, continuous improvement and excellence in customer service.

Chapter 2: Conflicts of Interest

Overview

Your personal activities and relationships must not conflict, or appear to conflict, with the interests of the company. Keep in mind, the Code can't specifically address every potential conflict, so use your conscience and common sense when questions arise, seek guidance.

General Principles

If you have a financial interest in a transaction between the company and a third party—even an indirect interest through, for example, a family member—that interest must be approved by your Principal Manager prior to the transaction. However, if you have a financial interest in a supplier or customer only because someone in your family works there, then you do not need to seek prior approval unless you deal with the supplier or customer or your family member deals with the company.

If you'd like to serve as an officer or director or consultant to an outside business on your own time, you must receive prior approval in writing from your Functional Manager (Head of Department). The Functional Manager must consult with the Director/CEO/GM prior to giving such approval. If your Functional Manager changes, or the circumstances of the outside business change substantially, you must seek re-approval. (Employees are permitted, however, to serve in family businesses that have no relationship to the company.) This rule does not apply to non-employee directors of the Company.

If you undertake any task outside the company that is related to the company's line of work, or if you undertake any task outside the company for personal benefit (financial or non-financial), this must be disclosed to the company and approval must be taken prior to accepting the task. This includes any type of assignment/employment/consultancy work outside the company. At its sole discretion, the company will decide whether the task conflicts with the company's interests and provide approval accordingly. An employee of the company is not allowed to engage in any assignment/employment/consultancy work outside the company without prior approval of the company.

Chapter 3: Financial Records

Overview

Every company financial record—including time sheets, sales records and expense reports—must be accurate, timely and in accordance with the law. These records are the basis for managing the company's business and for fulfilling its obligations to share owners, employees, customers, suppliers and regulatory authorities.

If you know of violations by others, take note: You must report those instances, or you are in violation of the Code. Accurate records are everyone's responsibility. It's always a good idea to double-check them.

General Principles

Always record and classify transactions in the proper accounting period and in the appropriate account and department. Delaying or prepaying invoices to meet budget goals is a violation of the Code.

All transactions must be supported by accurate documentation.

All reports made to regulatory authorities must be full, fair, accurate, timely and understandable. Employees must cooperate with into the accuracy and timeliness of financial records.

To the extent estimates and accruals are necessary in company reports and records; they must be supported by appropriate documentation.

Chapter 4: Use of Company Assets

Overview

Company assets are meant for company, not personal, use. Company assets include your time at work and work product, as well as the company's equipment and vehicles, computers and software, company information, and trademarks and name.

Common sense should prevail, of course. The occasional personal phone call from your workplace, for example, is inevitable. Substantial personal phone calls, however, represent misuse. The point is to recognize that theft or deliberate misuse of company assets is a violation of the Code.

General Principles

You may not use the company's assets for your personal benefit or the benefit of anyone other than the company.

You may not take for yourself any opportunity for financial gain that you find out about because of your position at the company or through the use of company property or information.

Misuse of company assets may be considered theft and result in termination or criminal prosecution.

You must have permission from your Functional Manager before you use any company asset—including information, work product or trademark—outside of your company responsibilities.

Before accepting payment for speeches or presentations related to the company or your work at the company, always get your Functional Manager's approval.

Company computer systems and equipment are meant for company use only. For example, they should never be used for outside businesses, illegal activities, gambling or pornography.

Chapter 5: Working with Customers and Suppliers

Overview

It often is customary to exchange gifts and entertainment with customers and suppliers. The key is to keep an arm's length relationship. Avoid excessive or lavish gifts that may give the appearance of undue influence. Avoid personal financial transactions with customers and suppliers that may influence your ability to perform your job.

General Principles

The Code prohibits employees from accepting lavish gifts or entertainment. This is an area in which your judgment is critical. For instance, modest holiday gifts are usually fine. But an expensive weekend trip probably would not be. If you are uncertain, seek prior written approval from your Functional Manager.

Gifts and entertainment for customers, potential customers and suppliers must support the legitimate business interests of the company and should be reasonable and appropriate under the circumstances. Always be sensitive to our customers' and suppliers' own rules on receiving gifts and entertainment.

Consistent with the obligation we all have to act with integrity and honesty at all times, you should deal fairly with the company's customers, suppliers, competitors and employees. No employee should take unfair advantage of anyone through misrepresentation or any unfair business practice.

Chapter 6: Protecting Information

Overview

It is your obligation to safeguard the company's nonpublic information. You should not share this information with anyone outside the company unless it is necessary as part of your work responsibilities.

Nonpublic information is any information that has not been disclosed or made available to the general public. Trading in stocks or securities based on nonpublic information, or providing nonpublic information to others so that they may trade, is illegal and may result in prosecution.

Nonpublic information includes items such as financial or technical data, plans for acquisitions or divestitures, new products, inventions or marketing campaigns, personal information about employees, major contracts, expansion plans, financing transactions, major management changes and other corporate developments.

General Principles

Do not disclose nonpublic information to anyone outside the company, except when disclosure is required for business purposes and appropriate steps have been taken to prevent misuse of the information.

Employees may not buy or sell stocks or securities based on nonpublic information obtained from their work at the company.

Disclosing nonpublic information to others, including family and friends, is a violation of the Code and may violate the law.

Just as the company values and protects its own nonpublic information, we respect the non-public information of other companies. If you have any questions about obtaining or using nonpublic information of other companies, contact CEO or Directors for guidance.

Records should be retained or discarded in accordance with the company's record retention policies. Consult with company legal Advisor regarding retention of records in the case of actual or threatened litigation or governmental investigation.

Chapter 7: Dress Code

Overview

WORLDLINK wants to ensure that the appearance of each employee is consistent with a professional image and standards of hygiene and safety.

General Principles

In general, WORLDLINK requires the following while employees are on duty

Restrictions

Universal dress code guidelines for all employees of WORLDLINK include the following restrictions:

S. No	Male	Female
1	Open toed-footwear, Slippers, Sandals	Slippers
2	Aerobics/ Exercise clothing	Aerobics/ Exercise clothing
3	Tight Jeans	Tight Jeans
4	Extremely low waist pants	Extremely low waist pants
5	T-shirts or collared shirts with prints and big patterns (except small embroideries or prints or logo)	Tank tops, spaghetti straps
6	Half pants	Mini & Micro Skirt
7	Sando vest	Tops with halter, strings, etc leading to excessive body exposure

Appearance and Personal Hygiene

All employees will practice good hygiene, daily showers and combing hair is a must. Clothing is expected to be neatly laundered. Jewelry must be kept to a minimum. General Grooming Standards should be followed at all times. (like cutting nails, cleaning ears, putting a light body spray as needed, etc)

Dress Down Day

Each Friday has been chosen as the day for business casual dress. Casual business wear is defined as: Casual clothing that is appropriate for an office environment (see above regarding restrictions). Employees are expected to exhibit good judgment in clothing choices on dress down day.

What to Wear

When business obligations take an employee out of the office, he or she should dress accordingly. Acceptable casual clothing includes:

- Jeans with the exception of tie dyed, holes, cut-offs or frayed edges.
- Khakis/casual pants, collared shirts, i.e., polo shirts.
- Sneakers

When and where a fixed set of uniform has been decided, the employees must wear the uniforms only as prescribed and there would be no dress down days for such employees.

In some occasion, HR department can instruct some specific dress code in order to increase the spirit and motivation level among the employees. There would not be any compulsion to any employee to wear dress as prescribed by the HR department.

Chapter 8: Time and Attendance Code

Duty Hour

Every employee must be present at the place of his/ her work at the time prescribed by the HOB. The HOB shall fix the working hours of the company, and may change the same if he/she deems so necessary at any time by putting up a notice thereof on the notice board.

The general working hours is 8 hours per day. There are three different shifts which are:

9.00 A.M. – 5 P.M	9.30 A.M. – 5.30 P.M	10.00 A.M. – 6.00 P.M

The company, fully or partially, may operate in shifts. It may assign any worker or employee working in any shift to work in any other shift according to its requirements. It shall be mandatory for every worker/ employee assigned to work in another shift as mentioned above to attend and work in that shift. While working under a shift system, every worker/ employee working in a shift must, at the end of his/her working hours, leave his/her work only after handing over the concerned task to his/her substitute after his/ her arrival. In case the substitute of any worker/ employee does not arrive, the concerned worker/ employee shall leave his/ her task only after securing the permission of the superior or the senior most person of the other shift.

The company may separately fix the working hours of any individual or group, or change the working hours of any worker/ employee in such a manner that he/she begins or ends his/her work any time before or after the normal working hours, according to the business requirement. The company may engage any worker/ employee in work for a period longer than the prescribed working hours in the light of the requirements of its work. It shall be the duty of every worker/ employee to work willfully in that manner as required. For such a case, payments would be made as per the company rules in line with the existing laws for extended work hours, or at its discretion, the company may choose to provide substitute leave on another day for the extra hours worked.

The work schedules would be as mentioned in MY WORK SCHEDULE of attendance software or as per the duty roster maintained in the department or as assigned by the superior.

Staff Lunch Time

The lunch break is restricted to 45 minutes during winter and one hour during summer. Department Heads shall ensure that the department is not left unattended during lunch break

Attendance

Being on the job, and on time, each working day or night, contributes much towards team effort, a continuous workflow, and better service to our clients. Even though lateness or absence may be for a valid reason, an extra burden is placed on other employees, which could result in reducing the quality of our service. Any employee who is going to be late or absent from work should notify the office as early as possible prior to the commencement of the workday.

WorldLink expects employees to be punctual and arrive at work on time every day. However, the company also understands and recognizes that employees may be late due to unavoidable reasons.

The company will tolerate up to 7 (seven) days of tardiness every month, out of which only 3 (three) days may be over 15 minutes. So, if an employee is late by 15 minutes for up to 4 days a month and late by over 15 minutes for up to 3 days a month, the company will accept it. However, for each additional day beyond 7 days of tardiness, the company will deduct one day's salary. Similarly, if an employee is late by over 15 minutes for 3 days in a month, one day's salary will be deducted the next time the employee is late by over 15 minutes in the same month. Persistent unpunctuality shall be recorded in the staff's personal file and duly reflected in the performance appraisal for the concerned staff.

An unauthorized absence is defined as any time an employee fails to report for their scheduled work hours, or fails to work the full amount of time for which the employee is scheduled. This does not include approved time off for vacation, prescribed leaves, company-initiated time off, or other excused absences prescribed by law or company policies.

Any employee absent for more than 30 days without information/explanation may be considered terminated from the services of WorldLink. Before termination of service he/she will be given a time limit of seven days to provide an explanation. If the explanation is inadequate or not provided within the stipulated time he/she will be terminated from service.

WORLDLINK retains the right to require employees to provide a statement from a health care provider upon request, to justify absences on health reasons.

In a situation where an employee, without prior approval, will be late reporting to work or unable to work as scheduled, the employee must notify his/her supervisor immediately. Employees should not rely on friends, relatives, or co-workers for communicating absences to the appropriate supervisor.

Excessive lateness/early departures and absenteeism, failure to provide proper notification of late arrivals, early departures, and unscheduled absences cannot be tolerated and will result in disciplinary action being taken by the company up to and including termination. Employees who fail to properly notify their superior, as per the rules, of absence and/or an unscheduled late arrival, early departure, have, in effect, abandoned their position. WORLDLINK considers job abandonment as a voluntary resignation.

Employees are responsible for checking with their department supervisor to learn the department's specific notification requirements in the event of absences.

Chapter 9: Administration of the Code

Distribution

All company employees will receive a copy of this Code at the time they join the company and will receive periodic updates. Also, any agent, consultant, government official or government employee who is retained by the company should receive this Code and understand the obligations under it.

Approvals

The appropriate Functional Managers must review and approve in writing any circumstance requiring special permission, as described in the Code. Copies of these approvals should be maintained by the company and made available to auditors or investigators.

Waivers of any provision of this Code for employees must be approved by the Board of Directors and promptly will be disclosed to the extent required by law or regulation.

Monitoring compliance

Employees should take all responsible steps to prevent a Code violation. Employees should report suspected Code violations to their manager or higher levels of management.

Investigations

The responsibility for administering the Code, investigating violations of the Code and determining corrective and disciplinary action rests with the HR and Legal Advisor of the Company.

The company's Finance & HR Department along with Legal advisor may conduct or manage investigations as deemed appropriate on behalf of the CEO & BOD's. They will work together with the employee's managers to recommend corrective and disciplinary actions for presentation to the BOD's and the Chief Executive Officer. For more information on the procedures that generally will be followed in the case of potential code violations, please refer to the Labor Law & Bi-Laws of the Company.

If allegations involve criminal conduct, employees should seek guidance from HR & the Legal advisor before engaging in any inquiries.

The Chief Executive Officer will periodically report Code violations and the corrective actions taken to the Board of Directors.

Disciplinary Actions

The company strives to impose discipline for each Code violation that fits the nature and particular facts of the violation. The company uses a system of progressive discipline. The company generally will issue warnings or letters of reprimand for less significant, first-time offenses. Violations of a more serious nature may result in suspension without pay, demotion, or any combination. Termination of employment generally is reserved for conduct such as theft or other violations amounting to a breach of trust, or for cases where a person has engaged in multiple violations. Violations of this Code are not the only basis for disciplinary action. The company has additional policies and procedures governing conduct.

Signature and Acknowledgment

All new associates must sign an acknowledgment form confirming that they have read the Code and understand its provisions. Failure to read the Code or to sign an acknowledgment form, however, does not excuse an associate from the terms of this Code.

It's Up to You

Administration of the Code is everyone's responsibility. There are colleagues to help you do the right thing. If you act with integrity and seek guidance when you are uncertain, you'll be doing the right thing. This Code is not an express or implied contract of employment and does not create any contractual rights of any kind between the World Link Communications Pvt. Ltd and its employees. In addition, all employees should understand that this Code does not modify their employment relationship, whether at will or governed by contract.

The World Link Communications Pvt. Ltd. reserves the rights to amend, alter or terminate this Code at any time and for any reason. Subsequently the interpretation of World Link Communication Pvt. Ltd. will be final and binding.
